CARRIED OFF BY A WHALE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 10.—The loss of six men from the whaler Charles W. Morgan, which arrived Saturday from the coast of the sea, is just made public. The men left the vessel in a small boat in pursuit of the whale. The whale was successfully harpooned, and started off at a rapid rate, towing after him the boat, which contained Second Mate H. A. Martin and five men. Another boat had been launched, but the party failed to catch up with the first one, and got setting in, they returned to the vessel. Nothing was ever found of the boat containing the second mate and men. It is believed the whale smashed the boat, killing the occupants.

The whaler Narwhal, from Fox Island, reports six men washed from the decks during a gale; but two of them were fortunately thrown back alive by a returning wave.

Do not take any chances of being poisoned or burnt to death with liquid stove polish, paints and enamels in bottles. The Rising Sun stove polish is safe, odorless, brilliant, the cheapest and best stove polish made, and the consumer pays for no expensive tin or glass package with every package.

A SHADY OUTLOOK.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The new congress is causing the Chicago world's fair people much uneasiness. This overwhelming majority of Democrats and farmers do not look encouraging for prodigal appropriations. It is the program of the Chicago people to ask for from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 from the government. But the commissioners and the local directors have organized in such a way that the principal officers are Republicans. For both economical and political reasons the next house will be disinclined to extend aid to the fair in any such sum as will be asked.

Pears' Soap secures a beautiful complexion.

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—The principal and most important subject now discussed in the world's fair circles is as to whether the colored people shall have a separate exhibit or any show at all at the coming exposition. The fact that the Chicago people of Chicago will hold a meeting on next Wednesday at Bethesda church to discuss that question. Protests are coming from all over the United States against the fact that President Harrison, in his world's fair appointments has not recognized the colored race.

Forty years of constant use—and still more valued than ever—Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

Salvation Oil, the great pain extinguisher, should be kept handy by all who handle tools.

LABOR LEGISLATION.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The next special work of the labor bureau will be the preparation of a full history of labor legislation and labor laws. Mr. Carroll D. Wright, chief of the bureau, has already planned to publish a book on the subject. Lawrence Groeland, the well known author and writer on labor topics, to enter upon the collection of material.

BRITISH EXPORTS.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The exports to America for October, as given in the board of trade returns, have been mistakenly quoted as showing that the decline in trade under the McKinley law is small. Those returns include part of the heavy shipments of September. The November returns will be the first reliable data showing the action of the new law.

A BANKRUPT DUCHESS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The deputy sheriff has returned unsatisfied the execution on several judgments aggregating over $50,000, which were obtained against the duchess of Marlborough last week. The duchess has no property here, and the income from the estate of her late husband cannot be levied upon.

GOVERNOR CAMPBELL ILL.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—A special from Columbus, O., says that Governor Campbell is so seriously ill that doctors have been forbidden. He is threatened with typhoid fever, and it is doubtful if he will be sufficiently recovered to attend the Thurman banquet Thursday evening.

EXCELLENCE IN OPERATING RAILWAYS.

In the achievement of excellence breadth must be combined with depth. It is power to conceive with grasp of detail. The larger the undertaking the more precise must be this comprehension of detail that every part may fit its purpose. In no instance does this stand out more clearly than in the conduct of a great railroad. Conceded to be the finest railway system in the world, the Pennsylvania lines owe their prominence to a management that joins comprehensive foresight with watchfulness of operations the most minute. A link in the hand of carriers that encircle the world, its officers and conductors in the traffic between the western states and the seaboard, the north and the south. They study the production of the mines, the fields and the forests, the causes that affect the ebb and flow of travel, and every detail of construction, maintenance, operation of the financial and accounts. Every rail must conform to a certain standard; every tie must pass inspection; every car and every locomotive built after designs that have taken years to perfect. Every bit of wood, iron and steel is examined; every wheel and axle tested; every valve and boiler tried. The form, shape and size of every plate, bar, bolt, nut, lock, key, arm, hinge, screw have been studied. The variation in height of rails on curves, the height of station platforms above the track, the briefest and most explicit expression of a train order, the kind and color of paper upon which tickets should be printed, the best instances that do not begin to give an idea of the number and variety of questions that have been met by the Pennsylvania officers with deliberation and experiment. The results speak for themselves in the prompt and safe running of trains, in the vigor and precision of the working of the great system.

On the Pennsylvania Lines nothing is done at haphazard. Decisions from a central authority insure uniformity of procedure over the vast territory covered by its tracks and employ frequent consultation of officers and employes bringing forth suggestions and discussions that improve the lines. Travelers to the east do not need to be told to take the Pennsylvania Lines. They present a system of through train service that has never been equaled on the American continent. On fast express trains Pullman Vestibule cars run through to Pittsburgh, Harrisburg, Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia and New York. The freedom from dust, smoothness of the track and the comforts and conveniences on every hand make travel a pleasure.

Full information regarding the Pennsylvania service can be obtained by addressing E. A. Ford, General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

A WOMAN'S WRATH.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 10.—Trunk, a boy was shot by Mrs. W. J. Trunk, this evening. Trunk was sitting on Mrs. W. J. Trunk's fence watching some boys play marbles. Mrs. W. J. Trunk ordered him away and when he did not go shot him.

President Diaz has appointed Don Leandro Fernandez, an eminent civil engineer to represent Mexico on the International Railway commission.

GERALD RELEASED.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 10.—At a late hour tonight the preliminary trial of Capt. Dolph Gerald, chief of Montgomery police force, who shot and killed W. W. Cotnam, was concluded. The justice before whom he was tried found no cause to place him under bond and he was released.

BONDS PURCHASED.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The amount of 4 1/2 per cent bonds redeemed today under the circular of October 9, was $71,800, making the total to date $4,444,000.

MARGARET LEE'S DIVORCE.

An American Author Highly Praised by Mr. Gladstone.

That a Brooklyn woman should write a good novel is not at all surprising, nor that it should deal with a great wrong and have a moral. But that it should be critically reviewed by England's greatest statesman, be warmly endorsed by him and on his recommendation have a large sale in England is quite an episode in literature.

Miss Margaret Lee is a serious and deeply earnest woman who formed the design early in life to become a novel writer—in fact, she directed her studies in school to that end, and began to write soon after being graduated. Her first work gained the price of $1,000 offered by The New York Herald for the best distinctively American novel, and was published under the name of "Arnold's Choice." It was followed soon by "Dr. Wilmer's Love," events of the late civil war forming the basis. Other works of minor importance followed, but all showed the same power—a special ability in social analysis.

She studied life—studied men and women of the middle and wealthier classes as they appear in trying circumstances and as they act under the temptations of this rushing modern life. In these studies her attention was often called to the curious and contradictory laws of different states on the subjects of marriage and domestic rights, and the dreadful wrongs made possible by such laws. She made a thorough and really lawyer-like study of this legal complexity, and the result was "Divorce," by far the most successful of all her works. The first edition of 10,000 was sold in a few weeks, and others have followed.

Mr. Gladstone read the book, and, as he says, found in it the best conclusions of the clearest intellects, stated with American directness and feminine grace. "Divorce," he said, "deals with the greatest and deepest of all human controversies. It is in America that this controversy has reached a stage more advanced than elsewhere." He commended the strength and courage with which the author of "Divorce" had dealt with the subject, and recommended the republication of the work in England. In six weeks thereafter a reprint of the book was on sale in England.

A Black Priest.

The Rev. Father Augustine Tolten, of Chicago, enjoys the distinction of being the only person of African descent who has become a priest in the Catholic church in America.

Tolten's career, from a slave boy in 1861 to a Catholic pastor in Chicago, in 1890, is highly creditable to him. In his boyhood he worked in a tobacco factory in Quincy, Ill., at fifty cents a day and gained a common school education.

He entered St. Francis College at Quincy and after four years of classical training went to Rome. In Rome the ambitious negro was admitted to the propaganda and began a course of study including two years of philosophy and four of theology. In 1881, at the age of 23, he was ordained priest and held services in St. Peter's. Returning to America, he officiated at services in Hoboken and New York, and then assumed a pastorate in Quincy, which he held four years. Father Tolten is now priest of a church at Dearborn and Thirty-sixth streets, Chicago.

Hunting for Indian Heirs.

In the first year of the present century a French trader named Jean Baptiste Beaudin married an Indian woman in whose veins flowed the blood of the Ottawa and Potawatomi tribes. Eleven years later the United States government purchased the Potawatomi reservation, a part of which is the site of the city of Chicago. The agreed price was $400,000, but for some reason at present unknown the money was never paid, and still remains in Uncle Sam's strong box. The authorities are anxious to turn this large sum over to the heirs.

OFFICER ALEX BEAUDIN.

No full blooded Indians of the tribe interested are now alive, but the descendants of Beaudin have put in a claim based on the assertion that the old trader's wife was a Potawatomi. Alex Beaudin, a Chicago police officer, is one of the leading applicants, and if he makes good his case, will be so wealthy that he never again will have to swim a claim.

Cables of the North Atlantic.

The North Atlantic is spanned by no less than eleven cables, all laid since 1870, though I think not all are working at the present time. Five companies are engaged in forwarding telegrams between North America and Europe, and the total length of the cables owned by them, including coast connections, is over 30,000 nautical miles.—Herbert Lawes (Webb in Scribner's).

A PECULIAR DISEASE.

A MAN WHO IS ALWAYS TEN SECONDS AHEAD OF HIMSELF.

His Nerves Are Awry, and He Always Acts One-Sixth of a Minute After He Ought—He Is a Neighbor of Jay Gould and Is Very Wealthy.

I was walking down Forty-seventh street the other day, attentively regarding Jay Gould's new parlor curtains, when the door of a house very near his opened, and a fine looking, middle aged gentleman stepped out, walked deliberately out to the edge of the brown stone steps and fell headlong into the street.

An instant later a colored man rushed out of the house, ran down the steps and lifted the fallen one, saying as he did so: "You should not venture out alone, sir. You know you have fallen so many times."

Now this was more remarkable than the fact that Jay Gould had new window curtains, so I at once transferred my attention. Was he an invalid? Surely not, with such a color and such a physique. Ah, I had it. He was a victim of the disease called locomotor ataxia, so named, a flippant medical student once said, "because when it attacks you, you can't locomote." But when the gentleman began to ascend the steps he walked with a step that was perfectly firm and steady, though very deliberate.

I was wrong again, for people afflicted with the above mentioned disease have a wobbly, uncertain gait that is painful. By this time the object of my attention had entered the house, the door was closed, and as there was nothing particularly communicative about the closed front of a stone house I was not likely to have my curiosity satisfied.

A REMARKABLE AFFLICTION.

But fortune favors even the ubiquitous news gatherer sometimes. As I stood waiting—knew not for what—a carriage drove up, a doctor's carriage, and from it stepped the eminent physician Dr. Davis, a man skilled above his fellows in the treatment of nervous diseases.

The next day, during the doctor's first office hour, I called upon him.

The learned man was very non-committal until I explained to him that I had at one time been a student of medicine, and was therefore entitled to know whatever he could tell me that would be of benefit. Thus reassured, Dr. Davis proceeded to explain the nature of his patient's strange malady.

"It is a case of great interest," said he, "to every man in the profession who knows anything of it. There is not another case on record that is the least like it. The disease of this gentleman, whom I will call Mr. Andrews, is an affection of the nervous system resulting from injuries received years ago in a railway accident. It is of a nature that has no parallel in medical history.

Those nerves which telegraph to the brain the sensations of touch, taste, smell, hearing and sight are so deranged that the transmission of sense is not, as in a healthy person, instantaneous. As nearly as we can calculate five seconds elapse before Mr. Andrews is conscious of any sensation, and five seconds more before he can make any response.

"The medical man is baffled in this case for the reason that this affliction manifests itself only in those movements of the body that require conscious direction from the brain. Actions which are performed involuntarily, such as winking or gasping, are performed the same as by a well person, and that makes it a question whether it is the nerves or certain portions of the brain that are affected.

HE ENJOYS EXCELLENT HEALTH.

"Mr. Andrews is in perfect physical condition. He eats heartily, sleeps well, and has an unimpaired digestion. Nor is he fully alive to the terrible possibilities of his position.

"Think of going through life ten seconds ahead of yourself! There is scarcely any calculating the things which might happen."

Mr. Andrews is a rich man, fortunately, and therefore can keep an attendant constantly with him, so that as yet he has experienced no serious injury. He never knows when he is approaching an obstacle or a danger. As in the case of his falling down the steps when his belated sight deceives him just as it is when a cab or a car approaches him, he neither hears nor sees them until five seconds after any one else would, and it is another five seconds before he can guide his movements by means of thought and get away.

When he is walking the action becomes mechanical, but he is constantly ahead of where he seems to be, and in order to find out exactly where he is he has to stop and catch up with himself.

When he converses with those about him it is a very peculiar fact that when a question is put to him it is ten seconds before he responds. Now this might be very embarrassing.

Suppose, on the other hand, a man were to take from him his watch; before he would have the power of preventing him or before he could give any alarm the thief might be far and away, and he might be away before the man could know that he had been robbed. A friend salutes him on the street, but he does not see the salutation until it is too late to respond, and of course the friend thinks he has been snubbed.

When Mr. Andrews first recovered from his accident he used to attend the theatre, where he would come upon the stage and drama. But he does not go any more. The peculiar manifestations of his malady caused much embarrassment to his friends who accompanied him. Appreciation of jokes and ludicrous situations came to him just ten seconds after everybody else. His hearty laugh would not be noticed in a general chorus. But his experience of the situation until it is too late to respond, and of course the friend thinks he has been snubbed.

In his recently published "Trials of a Country Parson" Dr. Jessep tells some amusing anecdotes picked up in Army. As thus: It is very shocking to a sensitive person to hear the way in which the old people speak of their dead wives or husbands exactly as if they'd been horses or dogs. They are always proud of having been married more than once. "You didn't think, miss, as I'd had five wives, now did you?" Ah, I have, though—lastways I buried five on 'em in the churchyard, that I did—and tree on 'em bewties!"

On another occasion I playfully suggested: "Don't you mix up your husbands now and then, Mr. Page, when you talk about them?" "Well, to tell you the truth, sir, I really do! But my third husband, he was a man! I don't mix him up. He got killed fighting—you've heard tell of that, I make no doubt? The others wasn't nothing to him. He'd his mixed them up quick enough if they'd interfered with him. Lawd! he'd made nothing of them!"

There is no one condition that tends in a greater degree to produce good health and vigorous growth of the body than a good, sound set of teeth.

An interesting exhibition. Women of culture and refinement all over the world are taking up the work of nursing with commendable ardor. A movement is on foot now in England to hold an exhibition of the new and improved apparatus in the shape of beds, chairs, clothing, dishes, etc., which have been invented for the comfort and convenience of invalids. The exhibition will be under the direction of the Association of Trained Nurses.—London Letter.

How to Mount Tapestry. The best way to mount a piece of tapestry is to stretch it, not too tightly, on a piece of well seasoned wood, and then keep it in a light, airy, though not draughty situation, where the sun can never shine directly upon the texture. Of course when the work in question is small enough to admit of it the simplest and far most advantageous way to preserve tapestry intact, and at the same time bring out its full beauty and rarity, is to treat it as if it were a picture and place it in a dark oak frame under glass.

I remember once seeing a dining room paneled in this manner with loom pictures against a dark green background. The effect was most unique and beautiful, and well repaid the trouble taken by the owner, a noted French dilettante and connoisseur.—Marie Adelaide Belle in Jennens-Miller Magazine.

WHAT IS SAPOLIO?
It is a solid handsome cake of scouring soap which has no equal for all cleaning purposes except in the laundry. To use it is to value it.

What will SAPOLIO do? Why it will clean paint, make oil-cloths bright, and give the floors, tables and shelves a new appearance. It will take the grease off the dishes and off the pots and pans. You can scour the knives and forks with it, and make the tin things shine brightly. The wash-basin, the bath-tub, even the greasy kitchen sink will be as clean as a new pin if you use SAPOLIO. One cake will prove all we say. Be a clever housekeeper and try it.
